SMITH FAVORS MCNARY - HAUGEN BILL RELIEF WORK RUSHED TO STRICKEN CITIES WHEN WIND RECEDES

ENDORSES MEASURE IN OPENING SPEECH IN OMAHA NEBRASKA

Governor Answers Questions In "Ad"; Sees McMullen

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 19.—Governor Alfred E. Smith resumed his campaign through the western farm belt today after a rather sensational start in his opening speech here last night, in which he not only gave what farm leaders consider an open endorsement of the McNary-Haugen principle but re-emphasized his prohibition views in an unscheduled discussion of this subject in this normally dry state.

The Democratic candidate was to leave here today headed for Oklahoma City, where he speaks Thursday night. He will interrupt his journey at Lincoln, Neb., for a conference with Gov. Adam McMullen, a farm leader, and later for frequent appearances as he passes through Kansas.

His opening speech last night was typical of the Smith New York knows, and set the tone of his campaign definitely as a brown-derry campaign throughout. He dropped the manner of the usual presidential candidate, talked to the crowd of 10,000 in the Omaha auditorium in his breezy, theatrical way, and then proved he was the same Smith for whom New York has shown such a fondness by striking boldly at a feudiness issued to his entry into this state.

He concluded his speech on farm relief, which in itself was a surprise, and then answered eight questions propounded to him in a newspaper advertisement which stared him in the face in every newspaper he picked up here.

Having answered them in his own way, he then suggested playfully that Herbert Hoover be asked the same questions.

Considerable significance is being attached to Smith's conference in Lincoln today with McMullen, who gave Hoover a conditioned endorsement and announced he was waiting for the Democratic candidate's Omaha speech before deciding his course definitely. McMullen invited the New York governor to visit him at the capitol.

Democratic leaders place much hope in Smith's declaration last night of the McNary-Haugen bill, but it was not entirely clear to some observers as to just how far he went, since he did not endorse the equalization fee, the "heart" of that measure, by name, but said the measure would be mechanics of the measure would be left open. Republicans regarded it as a skillful pronouncement.

By emphasizing his prohibition modification stand, Smith touched a friendly spot in the heart of the large foreign population in this state, which is predominantly "wet." A large percentage of the German and Bohemian votes is conceded to him. There are 300,000 Germans in the state and about 200,000 Bohemians, while other foreign nationalities are well represented.

HOOVER CONSIDERS POLITICAL STATUS IN SOUTHERN AREAS

Plans Conference With Delegation From Texas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Back from his two-day motor trip through northern New Jersey, Herbert Hoover today centered his attention upon the political situation in the south.

Arrangements were made for him to receive personal reports of the Texas situation from R. B. Creager, Texas Republican national committee man, who is bringing five Texans here to confer with the presidential nominee.

Hoover has heard a little of Texas developments since his visit to New Mexico four weeks ago when he received word from George Monary, El Paso banker, that Republican leaders were laying plans designed to carry this rock-ribbed Democratic state.

Reports concerning conditions in other sections of the south are to be given the nominee by Col. Horace Mann, in charge of the southern campaign.

Hoover's next speech is scheduled for October 6, at Elizabethton, Tenn., advance men will be sent there next week to arrange for a hurried trip. The present schedule calls for only a three-hour stop at Elizabethton. Hoover intends to go directly there and return by the same direct rail route with no stops other than those arranged by the railroad for railroad purposes.

His family the latter part of this week and make the fishing trip he has so often postponed.

STORM DIMINISHES ON NORTHERN TRIP

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—The tropical disturbance which passed over Florida, Georgia and South Carolina seemed well on its way to ship lanes of the Atlantic today with diminished intensity.

Of the three states, Florida felt the effects of the hurricane worst. Reports from the Georgia and South Carolina coast, over which the storm passed today, were that damage was slight, although communication was cut off for several hours and highways and railway tracks were in some cases impassable.

No deaths were reported north of Palatka, the storm apparently confined its devastations to property.

Complete checks of the casualties cannot be made for some days and perhaps, as in the 1926 hurricane, never. Relief and rehabilitation work must go on first.

ASK ASSISTANCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A plea for assistance to hurricane sufferers in the Virgin Islands was received today by the navy department from Col. Waldo Evans, governor general.

COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER AIR PORT IN XENIA

Merchants Confer With Visitors; Discuss Site

Discussion of the possibility of establishing an airport in Xenia featured the meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Tuesday night.

Three men who contemplate leasing a seventy-five acre tract of land in or near Xenia as a site for an airport, explained their views at the meeting.

Those interested in the proposal are J. W. Dietz, Dayton, airplane builder; A. E. Longstrech, Osborn, aerial photographer, and Clarence Shade, Osborn, parachute jumper.

It is the intention of these men to lease suitable land here to organize a training school of aviation. They declared that from twelve to fifteen scholars who desire to learn to fly is a sufficient number for all practical purposes.

It was pointed out that no training schools are located closer to Xenia than Dayton or Springfield and would be more convenient to Xenians. They declared that several Xenians had already expressed their desire to learn the flying game if an airport could be located here.

The sponsors of the plans told the association that in many cases the city purchased a suitable tract of land, leased it to a group of citizens or a civic organization, which in turn leased it for an airport.

The association agreed to appoint a committee which will cooperate with a committee recently appointed by directors of the Greene County Auto Club to investigate the feasibility of the plan.

The recent committee appointed is composed of R. A. Kelly, C. W. Murphy and Theophil G. White. This committee's duty is to interview Xenians and attempt to learn what local sentiment prevails with regard to the proposal.

Possibility of an airport for Xenia was called to the attention of the auto club by C. W. Murphy, Delver Belden, club secretary and Theophil G. White, as a result of questionnaires sent out by the aircraft division of the Ford Motor Co., Detroit.

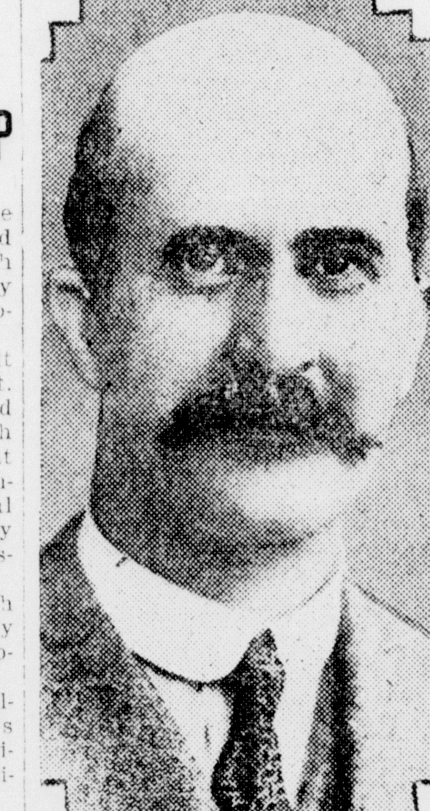

If an airport is established here, it would be available as a landing field for all planes passing over the city. Similar cities the size of Xenia, including Urbana, Lebanon and Greenville, have such facilities.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—Michael "Mike the Pipe" Shinkman, alleged slayer of Philip "Funny Face" Corry, today was to be served with an indictment charging second degree murder in connection with the killing.

The indictment was returned late Tuesday, according to Assistant County Prosecutor Donald Kennedy, after the grand jury reported that it found insufficient evidence upon which to base a first degree murder indictment.

MERCHANTS FAVOR CITY OWNED ELECTRIC PLANT

Retail Body Submits Petitions To City Commission Requesting Action; City Defers Action On Rate Schedule.

Agitation for establishment of a municipal light plant for Xenia was revived Wednesday when petitions containing the signatures of 124 local merchants, endorsing the action of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association, declaring in favor of a city-owned light plant for Xenia were filed with City Commission, which met in special session at noon.

The petition requested that the commission investigate such a plant and "present to the citizens of Xenia a suitable plan of procedure to obtain a municipal plant for Xenia."

Decision to circulate the petitions was reached at a meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Tuesday night. The association has a membership of about eighty business men who have declared in favor of a municipal lighting system for the city.

Commission deferred passage of a maximum rate ordinance requested by The Dayton Power and Light Co., through J. C. Mathieu, vice president, until its next regular meeting, September 27.

The company proposes to file with the Utilities Commission upon passage of the ordinance raising the present minimum rate charged from 50 cents to 75 cents, a reduced schedule of commercial and domestic light rates for Xenia, to remain in effect until expiration of president until a special meeting Thursday at 4 p. m.

Commission also sold to Otis and Co., Cleveland, O., $11,000 worth of municipal bonds issued to finance purchase of a new pump fire truck which has been delivered. The Cleveland firm submitted the high bid of three sealed bids received, agreeing to take the bonds at 5 per cent interest and pay a premium of $95.70 although they were issued at 5 1/2 per cent. The First Citizens Corp., Columbus, and the Xenia National Bank, also made bids.

DEMPSEY AND ESTELLE HAVE SORRY PLAY UNTIL LAST THREE MINUTES

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—For two hours and a half, "The Big Fight" which brought Jack Dempsey back to Broadway last night, was tireless melodrama.

For its last three minutes and a half, it was packed with thrills which brought the first night audience whooping to its feet.

All the glamor and drama action of a heavyweight championship fight were packed into the last few minutes of the otherwise sorry little play in which Jack and his wife, Estelle Taylor, are co-starring—their first effort upon the legitimate stage.

Dempsey, lithe and brown and grim, brought an appreciative yell of delight from the audience when he stripped off his familiar white sweater and flaunted his muscles and stepped forth in the red and black trunks he wore in his last ring battles.

And what Dempsey does to the unfortunate "battling baker" of the play is a caution. The management of "The Big Fight" advises us that this part will be played by relays of actors. It is quite likely that they will run out of actors sooner than of cash customers for the ex-champion shot over last night was closer to the real thing than many seen in the prize ring.

It took Dempsey about half a minute of the second round of a truly stirring battle to drape the ponderous form of Ralph Smith, who plays the part of "Battling Baker," inert across the canvas. Smith lay there as though happy that it was all over. In his ring days, Jack of Manassa never learned to pull a punch, and he apparently hasn't learned the art since he turned actor.

STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR PROPOSES RELIEF FOR MINERS

Ask Contributions For Relief Of Ohio Strikers

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—A plea for the organization of a state relief system for striking miners in Ohio was made in a resolution read before the Ohio State Federation of Labor in convention here.

The resolution asked sister organizations in the federation to assist in obtaining contributions to help the miners through the winter.

The miners have "battled" seven months to uphold the principle of collective bargaining and thousands of their families are suffering as a result," the resolution said.

Although the miners have adopted a new scale granting reductions in wages and granting concessions in working conditions many employers have refused their overtures, the resolution declared.

Other resolutions introduced and read include: one requesting legislation for a pension fund for school custodians; another requesting legislation banning the import of prison made goods into Ohio from other states; a third requesting legislation banning the use of compressed air painting machines in Ohio and another appealing to federation members to use and purchase only union labeled goods and merchandise.

NEW YORK PREPARES TO RECEIVE STORM; SHIPPING WARNED

Hurricane Has Lost Some Intensity In Trip North

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—New York prepared to receive a taste of the West Indies hurricane late today. Weather bureau advisers warning shipping between Cape Hatteras and southern New England were ordered.

The storm, somewhat lessened in intensity after its long path of devastation was due to pass over Atlantic City in the late afternoon or early evening.

Northeast gale warnings were predicted all along the coast and high seas along the coastline were predicted. New York City itself felt the first hint of bad weather today in decreased temperature and cloudiness. Rain fell during the night.

The center of the disturbance is expected to pass over the Atlantic before it reached the latitude of New York but the hurricane has already fooled the weathermen once. When the storm made for the east coast of Florida it was predicted it would cross the state and strike the southern edges of Georgia and Alabama. But the hurricane took a twist east and traveled north to Savannah and Charleston where it drove was sufficient to halt wire communication and cause torrential rainfall.

In the storm will sail the U. S. S. Bridge, carrying nearly 2,500,000 pounds of relief foodstuffs for Porto Rico. The ship, probably will feel the force of the blow tonight.

Strong winds, whipping the harbor, blew the Standard Oil tanker "Christy" Pineda across Kill Van Kull, grounding her on Staten Island.

Deep tugs pulled the ship off into eight waters within a half hour and she proceeded upstream under her own power, apparently undamaged.

Intense winds within the ship off into eight waters within a half hour and she proceeded upstream under her own power, apparently undamaged.

Palm Beaches And Lake Okechobee Worst Hit

By UNITED PRESS

The disturbance which is now cutting across Atlantic steamship lanes is only a breath of wind compared to the gale that landed with terrific force on Palm Beach, Fla., cut across the peninsula and then veered off toward the eastern coast again.

With the partial restoration of communication lines, the relief work was speeded today, and reports indicate that food and medicine were needed badly in Florida and Porto Rico.

Governor Horace N. Tower of Porto Rico, in a dispatch written for the United Press, said he could give no definite estimate of number of lives lost. He did say, however, that recent reports did not warrant placing the fatality list as high as 1,000.

The first official Red Cross report was brought in on the Florida death toll, and showed that 400 persons had lost their lives, most of them in the Palm Beaches and the Lake Okechobee area.

The nation opened its pocketbook, and thousands of dollars were pouring into the headquarters of relief agencies. Railroads in Florida co-operated in the work by furnishing free transportation to physicians and nurses.

The after-effects of the hurricane were felt as far north as New York where rain fell last night and the temperature dropped.

SEBRING, Fla., Sept. 19.—Col. L. S. Lowry, Florida National Guard, in charge of relief work in the Okechobee Lake area, estimated after a survey today that "the hurricane death list may reach 500."

J. T. Lurvey of the Tampa Red Cross chapter, in charge of that organization's work in the area, concurred with Lowry.

Their estimates were based on a survey of the towns along the Lake Okechobee, where waves similar to an ocean tidal wave devastated such settlements as Belle Glade, Pahokee and Canal Point.

Days and possibly weeks, Col. Lowry said, will be required to determine correctly the number of dead, injured and missing in the section.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Red Cross headquarters were advised today that the West Indies hurricane left a toll in Palm Beach County, Florida of 400 dead, 15,000 homeless, and property damage of $30,000,000.

This word, sent by Howard W. Selby, chairman of the county Red Cross chapter, and James H. Gilman, chapter disaster chairman, said the 9,000 persons were being fed at organized, and 8,000 persons were without change of clothing because the storm had swept their belongings away.

"Food and water conditions satisfactory so far," the message said. "Temporary shelter is so far satisfactory. Sanitary conditions good along coast, but becoming very serious in western half of county."

The hurricane, which devastated portions of the West Indies and Florida, was centered today between Raleigh and Cape Hatteras, N. C., moving northward, or possibly north northeastward, the weather bureau advised.

"Whole gale" warnings, indicating a wind velocity of slightly less than the hurricane itself, were posted from Cape Hatteras to Provincetown, Mass., and ordinary storm warnings north of that point to Eastport, Me.

RAILROAD PARK IS CITY BEAUTY SPOT

Home-owners here last month recalled the bill-boards and log-yard that used to mar territory on S. Detroit St., near the Pennsylvania Railroad station and marveled at the change wrought there.

The park there, familiar to Xenians, was new to many visitors who had not returned here for several years. Railroad gardeners under C. A. Kennedy, Pennsylvania landscape gardener here have charge of the tract re-claimed from its former "eyesore" appearance and is now regarded as one of the city's beauty spots.

GOVERNOR PRAISES GROCERS' ALLIANCE AND INVITES MEET

"You deserve the commendation and support of good citizens everywhere," said Governor Theodore Christensen of Minnesota to members of the International Grocers' Alliance in inviting the organization to hold its second salesmen's convention in Xenia.

The alliance is a co-operative group of independent grocers banded together to combat chain stores through group buying. Members see in the organization the salvation of the independent grocer.

The Eavey Co., wholesale grocers, has the wholesale franchise for supplying I. G. A. members in Southern Ohio while the Richmond, Ind., branch of the Xenia company has a similar franchise in Indiana.

The convention of salesmen was recently held in Indiana and has been invited to meet in Minnesota by the governor, by Mayor George E. Leach, of Minneapolis, president of A. R. Rogers, president of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association. The governor's letter follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to confirm the invitation that is being extended to your organization to hold its 1929 convention in Minnesota. The people of Minnesota will extend to you a hearty welcome and make every arrangement for your comfort and convenience."

"This country needs the little grocer who manages and operates his own business and takes an interest in the affairs of the community in which he lives. It would be a sorry thing for America if the business in its small communities were controlled and dictated by men living in large cities, unacquainted with the needs of the communities from which they derive their profits and indifference to them."

"The small town must not be permitted to become a settlement of hired men. It must continue to be a place where individual merchants investing their own money and operating their own enterprises have the opportunity and incentive to advance the cause of their communities. To advance the cause of the independent grocer is one of the efforts to which your organization is committed and in this you deserve the commendation and support of good citizens everywhere."

Mr. Herbert Patterson is taking a week's vacation from his work at the Huston-Bickett hardware store, and is visiting relatives in Greenfield, O.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Zell will entertain members of the Cooking Club at their home on W. Market St., Thursday evening.

Miss Dorothy Johnston has resumed her work in the ready-to-wear department, Hutchison and Gibney Store, after being confined to her home by illness several days.

Mrs. J. W. Gibney returned Wednesday from New York City, where she has been purchasing new stock for the Hutchison and Gibney Store.

Miss Jennie Moffett, Social Service League nurse, is in need of soft, white cloths for use in sick rooms. Anyone having the material is asked to notify the league.

Mrs. Ella Nisonger, N. Galloway St., is expecting to have as her week end guest, her nephew, Attorney W. C. Plummer of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mrs. Paul D. Espey and two children returned Wednesday from Bay View, Mich., where they spent several weeks.

FORT WILLIAM HAS $20,000 FIRE LOSS EARLY WEDNESDAY

Damage estimated at $20,000 was caused by a fire, originating in the Caraway restaurant at Fort William, small Clinton County village, early Wednesday morning, which for several hours threatened destruction of the entire town.

When the blaze was discovered by a telephone operator, the restaurant was a mass of flames, which spread rapidly and in a short time had consumed a barn and ice house nearby.

The blaze also destroyed the residence, garage and all out-buildings of Mayland Brown as well as the residences of Bert Stevens and James Young and all surrounding buildings. Many other homes were damaged before the fire was brought under control.

A conflagration threatening the village, out-of-town assistance was called. An inadequate water supply hampered fire departments. The origin of the blaze is a mystery.

AGRAMONTE STILL ACTIVE THOUGH 90; STILL LOVES FIGHT

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 19.—General Agramonte, 90 years old today, and the oldest American living in Mexico, had a number of things to look back upon as he smoked cigars and drank whiskey toasts in honor of his birthday.

He recalled the charge of the Light Brigade.

He had two fist fights during the past year—both of which he won. He admits having drunk "enough whiskey to float a battleship."

He has been married three times. He has been in five wars.

He has twin "boys," seventy-four years old, both of whom he insists look older than he.

He is quoted as saying: "When I get too old to look at a well-shaped ankle, I want to be put in my grave."

And when he was asked by the United Press, "if he would live his life the same way if he had to do it again," he answered somewhat ruefully:

"I'm afraid I would."

In Mexico Since 1888

General Agramonte has lived in Mexico since 1888. At present he is a patent attorney although at various times he has been associated in all kinds of enterprises.

He was born in Havana, September 19, 1830. His mother was American and his father Mexican.

After being educated in France, General Agramonte became a soldier of fortune. The wars in which he participated were: the Crimean; the Indian mutiny; the Mexican Revolution; the United States Civil War; and the Cuban War of Independence. He came out of the Civil War a Major. During the charge of the Light Brigade in the Crimean War, General Agramonte was serving his first enlistment and he saw the famous attack from a point on the front about two miles away.

Wounded numerous times in these wars, the general also has a few scars of more personal encounters.

Two Encounters

Twice in the past year, General Agramonte showed that he still has the courage of his youth. On one occasion he arrived home and found a peddler molesting his wife who is 72 and an invalid. The general ejected the peddler from the house and hammered a process-server tried to arrest him under the impression that the general was some one else. When the process-server would not be convinced of his mistake, General Agramonte pushed him out the door and then when his unwelcome guest returned punched him in the face.

On the other occasion a process-server tried to arrest him under the impression that the general was some one else. When the process-server would not be convinced of his mistake, General Agramonte pushed him out the door and then when his unwelcome guest returned punched him in the face.

As he departed the official was warned that if he returned he would be shot.

Despite his age it is only in the last few years that he has suffered from a degree of ill health. Bourbon whiskey, the general believes, is the best drink man ever invented and he asserts that both his own experience and that of others shows that it is health-giving and never intoxicating so long as not mixed with other drinks.

The general has had his Bourbon daily for most of his life and smokes a dozen or fifteen cigars.

Declaring that the solicitor was given notice of the apparent insufficiency, the board asked the court to determine whether disputed signatures are valid or invalid.

Never a Marcel Wave

By Edna Wallace Hopper

On the stage, in public and at private functions my hair always attracts. During my performances women never fail to ask the secret of my perfect wave and the youthful, lively sheen of my hair.

It is very simple. I wave my own hair. First I moisten it with my liquid hair-dress, Wave and Sheen. I use a comb to apply it. Then I carefully insert the comb in a piece of chiffon over my head. By the time I am ready to complete my toilette the waves are in to stay.

A complete shaven-free from stickiness, is the chief charm of this simple method. Wave and Sheen is the only dressing I would use on my hair. It is the only preparation I know that does not give the "plastered" effect, which I cannot tolerate. The hair, must have some air in order to be healthy and free from dandruff.

You can get a bottle of my Wave and Sheen at any toilet counter. It is guaranteed. 75 cents. Adv.

FIND SIGNATURES ARE INSUFFICIENT

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy held invalid Tuesday fifteen signatures on an initiative petition to amend article four, section four of the Ohio constitution for the purpose of providing for a law increasing the salaries of judges of state courts, so as to take effect and apply to judges holding office at the time the law was passed.

The court found that the total number of signatures of legal sufficiency is 439. SPARKS HONORED AT KI-RO MEETING

The financial report of the Greene County Home-Coming and the construction of the Shawnee Park Auditorium, was read at the joint Kiwanis-Rotary Club meeting in the auditorium, Tuesday evening.

Harry Sparks, who supervised construction of the auditorium and donated largely of his time in the work, was presented a handsome traveling bag by the two clubs.

Judge R. L. Gowdy of the Common Pleas Court, gave the principal address of the evening on "The Courts." He described the functioning of the various bodies and the progress of the law.

A large percentage of both clubs attended the meeting.

ENJOINS SIDEWALK CONSTRUCTION IN COURT; OTHER NEWS

An injunction to enjoin the village of Fairfield and Harry McDonald, as contractor, from constructing a sidewalk along property owned by him in the village, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Lewis F. Miller.

Declaring he owns 6.48 acres of land in Fairfield, adjoining S. Dayton St., on the west side of the thoroughfare, the plaintiff says the village council, in an ordinance passed July 13, ordained that he should construct a sidewalk all along that portion of his land that adjoins S. Dayton St.

Lewis sets forth that he refused to comply with the order inasmuch as for a distance of 150 feet, that portion of the street is from two to three feet higher than the proposed sidewalk, according to specifications and the grade adopted by the council.

The plaintiff charges the village threatens to build the sidewalk at a depth two or three feet lower than the sidewalk grade of the street, if this is done, he points out, the surface water from the

It is charged the village council failed to advertise for bids on the contract but instead awarded the contract for construction of the sidewalk to Harry McDonald without any competitive bidding. George H. Smith is attorney for the plaintiff.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

AN OPEN DOOR—And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.—Isa. 2:2.

GRAFT IN NEW YORK

Much larger sums are wasted and pocketed in graft in New York City today than in the days of the Tweed Ring, is the conclusion of John Bakeless, who has just completed an investigation for "The Forum" magazine.

Some of the items of New York's annual waste bill are listed as follows:

Traffic wastes	$500,000,000
Smoke wastes	$96,000,000
Graft	$50,000,000
Municipal inefficiency	$50,000,000
Harbor and freight waste	$14,000,000
Wasted water	$7,300,000
Wasted structural steel	$6,000,000
Lost milk bottles	$2,500,000

Twenty cents of the taxpayers' dollar is for waste plus graft, according to the statistics compiled by Mr. Bakeless.

"Twenty per cent," he says, "seems to be a fair if not a conservative estimate; and if the example of the Tweed Ring is worth anything, it is safe to say that the percentage was at least no smaller in the past. Take twenty per cent of New York's total expenditure since the chartering of the greater city in 1898, then, and you have a figure roughly representing thirty years of speculation and extravagance. The sum thus arrived at is $1,355,501,632. It is, to be sure, no more than a guess that tries to be scientific; but it is not unreasonable, and probably errs, if anything, on the side of conservatism.

"The city," continues Mr. Bakeless, "maintains needless officials—some of them at high salaries. There is, for example, the city chamberlain, who once performed the ordinary functions of the treasurer of a great corporation. But since then the office of comptroller has been established, and the chamberlain's duties have fallen from him, one by one. Today he earns his salary by deciding in which banks the city's cash shall be deposited, and countersigning checks. For this the city pays him $12,000 a year. Is it any wonder that Henry Bruere, the Chamberlain of the Mitchell administration, proposed that his own office should be abolished? But New York still keeps the good old office going—to the average municipal politician the proposal to abolish an office is as near blasphemy as mortal lips can come.

Mr. Bakeless concludes his article on "The City of Glorious Graft" by stating that "the remedy is obvious enough—the working out of definite policies for the financial future such as exist in every ordinary business.

WORTH WHILE SERVICE

One of the best features of trading in the local stores is the intelligence of the service that the customers of these stores obtain. Our stores have made it their aim to attract a fine class of young people to work for them. They offer positions attractive to intelligent young folks, and then they train these clerks how to sell goods well.

They train salespeople to give reliable information about their goods, so that they assist customers in making judicious purchases. They encourage them to be generous in giving time to customers, so that people are not hurried into making wrong decisions, and getting stuff that will not be satisfactory. Purchases made under these favorable conditions are more likely to be satisfactory than those made in other cities.

HARDSHIP

A news dispatch some days ago carried the information that a Pennsylvania woman, aged 77, had been rescued after four days and nights in the mountains. She lost her shoes and was forced for the most of the time to go barefooted. She lived on berries. At the end of her experience she complained only of being a little tired.

There's still some good human stock in this country, despite our fast pace, little sleep and over-eating. Barbarism produced better men and women, physically, than civilization does. Only the strong could stand the hardships. The weak died and the race was kept strong. That is not a complete argument for a return to barbarism, but we might well take on some of the physical hardships. It is especially good for youth, and for middle age when the stomach shows signs of being permanently expanded.

NO SPEED HERE

It is pleasant to learn that not everything in America is associated with speed. Despite some amazing factory records not all manufacturing is done in a hurry. Recently a disk weighing 50 pounds was cut out of a huge piece of glass weighing two tons. The disk, which is to be used in a great telescope, is nearly six feet across and 11 inches thick. The glass was cast in May, 1927, and cooled during the following eight months. It was cooled slowly so that there should be no appreciable stress or strain in the piece. A hole eight inches across was cut through the center of the disk. This was cut with a drill at the rate of an inch a day.

Perhaps we should live longer and be happier if work were done better and more slowly.

BEING A SPORT

Somebody has said that it is easy to be a good sport in any matter that you don't care much about. It is not easy to be a good sport when you are so interested in the outcome of a contest that you are swayed by emotion as much as by logic. There is no more admirable human quality than the capacity for being fair when your own comfort and your own interests are heavily involved.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK.—Further additions to the list of things that many persons in the hinterland want to know about New York, as indicated by numerous inquiries fired at the Diarist.

Where can I find out about an estate left by —, which includes Wall Street and Broadway, and for which no heirs have been found? I believe I have a claim to the money.

(The name is left blank, because variations of this question are being asked constantly, with the name of the estate different. One of the most heartless of the confidence games played in New York is that of making persons at a distance believe that great wealth awaits them from an "old New York estate" if they will only claim it, and then collecting "investigation fees." The shapers concoct a story about a mythical estate involving some such common name as Smith, Jones, Brown, Williams or Cohen, have it broadcast in farm magazines, women's weeklies and the like, attract hundreds of inquiries, and collect hundreds of "investigation fees." Of course, these estates are mythical.)

What is the name of an agency I can get to handle a wonderful singer, my daughter, in getting into concert and opera?

(Exactly the same question is bothering thousands of other mothers. Piano and "voice" lessons ruin thousands of lives each year, because kin-folk get the idea that any girl who can play a Liszt composition, or any boy who can sing "Last Night Was the End of the World," without "breaking" his voice, was predestined to be a musical artist. Radio is the easiest way to gain attention today. The old method of "breaking into music" was for father to mortgage the house and send mother and daughter to New York. There the mother followed the usual procedure of putting daughter into the hands of an agency which, if the money was forthcoming, engaged one of the concert halls for an afternoon, hired spectators and an accompanist, put in a few potted palms, arranged a program of four or five pieces common enough for the critics to be certain to recognize them, advertised the appearance in the conventional way and enticed the critics over to hear the new Farrar. This sort of thing had to be repeated several times before it was apparent whether daughter would get a chance to earn $200 a week in vaudeville, or have to go back to Lexington, Ky., or Kankakee, Ill., and wait on tables in the Gem or Busy Bee restaurants.

The thing for a mother or father of a child suspected of having musical talent to do, is to show the boy or girl off as much as possible at local events, to give him or her "stage presence," then try to get the talented one on an air program. The agency which handles many of the world's greatest musicians and singers recently signed to long-term contracts two singers "discovered" on the radio. Neither had ever been in New York.)

What do you want to know about New York? Ask C. K., 2200 Times Building, New York, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Plenty of variety in today's menu, don't you think? I thought at first of putting bananas into the breakfast menu, but decided we could have them any day in the year, and it would be wiser to substitute some of the fresh fruits, which are at their best just now. The quantities are for two, although they are pretty liberal, and the meat dish, at least, will serve three.

Today's Recipe.

Eggs in Bacon Rings—Oil the bottom of a muffin pan. Place a strip of bacon around inside of pan. Break an egg in the center. Salt slightly and bake in a moderate oven until the egg is set. The bacon will be crisp by the time the egg is cooked. It takes eight to twelve minutes to cook them. Remove ring from pan. Sprinkle with pepper and serve at once.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Framing the Completed Picture

The first thing I planned was a becoming haircut. I had no wish to make of Patricia anything she was not. Shingle and boyish crops are fine for those constituted to look well in them, but for Patricia, the softest wave the most conservative cut, and her hair softened and beautified through regular shampooing, and just the faintest touch of brillianine.

From there on, the rest was a pleasure I have not often experienced. In her life there had never been much money to be spent on clothes, and Patricia had been one of that vast majority who think that style is dependent upon cost. After I decided upon the frame for the picture I had myself created, I explained how Paris stick always to the simplest of lines and the finest of materials depending first upon simplicity and fineness, and perhaps a flare of the skirt, a soft drape, a delicate touch of fragile lace at throat or wrists, or an unusual arrangement of buttons, to give the effect which distinguishes their gowns.

For Patricia I chose brown, the deepest shade of soft seal brown, pools of beauty and which accentuated the lovely high lights of her sunlit hair. The creator to whom I had taken demure little English girl catalogued her instantly, and all the gowns he brought for our inspection were simple in cut, with skirts neither too short nor too extreme.

When we returned home that night I was well satisfied that John had lost his $1,000, as indeed he had. For Patricia was the gainer, not only of the money, but of a new levelness.

In real life things don't always work out the way we romanticists would wish them to, but it still one of the pleasurable memories of my career—the meeting between John and his "ugly duckling." He never questioned the loss of his bet and without betraying any confidences, I may safely tell you that the prettiest bride of the season was the one I gave away to the son of my dearest friend.

And do you think Patricia has ever forgotten the things she learned about herself in these three months? She is famous as one of the most beautiful matrons in Europe, and I think if you were to ask her just how she got that way, she would be simple and sincere enough to talk in terms of beauty technique.

NUTS GOOD BUILDERS UP, BUT OH, HOW FATTENING!

The Curstone Songster
"I cannot take the hootin' owl
Nor guinea-hen, nor sea-gull;
But the whistle of a peanut-stand!"
Losh, there's a song that's regal!

Some time ago, in P. P. A.'s humor column in New York, there was a sort of symposium in rhyme on favorite musical sounds. The contribution of A. V. — evidently a Scotchman — went straight to my heart. The whistle of a peanut-stand! I have walked blocks out of my way to avoid its lure when on my periodic reducing regimes.

Nuts, on account of their large percentage of fat (with the exception of chestnuts), are high in calories, therefore are fat-tending. Even more so than candy. Ten to twelve whole peanuts, or one-half ounce of nut meats—and other nut meats—register 100 C. Nut butters register the same to the one-half ounce (two and one-half level teaspoons). Because they are so high in fat, nuts have to be thoroughly masticated, and as butter, one-fourth cup milk, one-fourth teaspoon celery salt. Cook the whole onions in boiling salted water until tender, but not broken. When fork pierces them easily drain off water and rinse in cold water. This makes them firm for stuffing. Remove centers carefully. Add the removed portion, chopped fine, to the crumbs, egg, parsley, salt, butter and celery salt. Mix thoroughly. Fill the holes with mixture. Place the onions in a small pan. Sprinkle the salt over them. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

a gaining food they are blue ribbon winners. They are a splendid food, too, because their protein is of especially good quality. In fact, it is believed to be practically equal in its biological value, or building and repair properties, to that of meat protein.

Here's a testimony to their fattening value:
"I'm not a big eater, but I've learned to eat one-half pound of peanut butter every day. At first I had to cultivate a taste for it, but now I can't leave it alone. Due to this, I am up to 160 pounds, while a year ago I weighed only 110—a 50 pounds gain. For my height, this is my correct weight."

"Advise your thin readers, Doctor, to eat lots of peanut butter, if they want to get fat. Every night I drink a cup of cocoa and eat three peanut butter sandwiches."

"THE PEANUT FIEND."
The amount of peanut butter which The Peanut Fiend consumes seems very large—1600 calories—but he apparently got away with it. I would advise those who want to use nut butter for gaining to begin in small amounts and increase very gradually, as you would do with any gaining food.

Now here's another side of the nut question:
"I am proud of the fact that I reduced 30 pounds by Peterizing and have kept my weight for two years now. I weigh 110, which is my normal weight, as I am but five feet tall. I am a stenographer, 20 years old. I never felt better than now, and I look much better. Here's my problem:

"I love peanuts, and of course I know they are fattening. I can't seem to resist them, but

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

I spent a day recently in a beautiful hotel located on the main street of a small New England town. It is a large building, but because of high ceilings and elaborate lounging rooms has comparatively little space devoted to guest rooms. Space is wasted. The grounds, too, are expensively laid out. Of course the hotel doesn't pay. There is no attraction there to make people willing to pay resort prices and even if all rooms are kept filled at ordinary transient rates, the hotel loses money.

The point simply is that I wonder why the owners didn't think of all this and know what they were doing before they went to the expense of building the hotel. Experimenting with actual money is always too costly on paper with imaginary money. Enterprises that are successfully launched with small capital must have all facts before them in advance.

Peter's Adventure

THE DAUNTLESS AVIATOR
"Even there, upon the ship, partly sheltered as he was, Cormorant felt very shaky."

"The wind tore at his feathers and whistled through the rigging and he had to hunch over with all his might and main to save himself from being blown away. He was really rather frightened and certainly not at all prepared for the chuckle that Albatross gave at his word of warning."

"Ha! Ha! Heel! Heel!" laughed the great fellow. "Imagine my seeking shelter upon a ship! Why I couldn't count the storms that I this what I do: I take them in my mouth, chew them in a while and then eject them. Nasty habit, I guess, but I do this only in the privacy of my own room. Some one told me that I absorb the fat through the saliva even though I don't swallow them. Is it true, Doctor, that food is counted the minute you take it in your mouth?"

"L." There is very little absorption of food in the mouth, L. But while you chew on any food, you involuntarily swallow small amounts. After getting your letter, I tried your little scheme and from my experience, I imagine you get at least one-fourth of the value of the peanuts in that manner. So, if you chew 100 C. But why not take some peanuts in your allotted calories? You've evidently found your correct maintenance number.

FEATURES

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEW YORK — Congressman John Q. Tilson, chairman of the eastern Republican speakers bureau, is what can best be described as "an old war-horse" in politics.

The congressman is not as well known as he ought to be.

Politicians all know him, but the general public — no. The very nature of John Q.'s duties keeps him in the background, which is too bad, for he is one of the most interesting person-alities in public life—and one of the most influential, too.

Tilson is from Connecticut. But do not jump to the conclusion that Connecticut's destinies—or New England's—or any other mere section of the country's—are the only destinies he has a mighty powerful voice in shaping, at our national capital. As majority leader in the house of representatives, he is liable to have a good deal more to say than your own district's representative—dear reader—from Brown, Jones and Robinson counties, or the first, second and 'steenth wards of the mighty city of Podunk.

What reminded me of Tilson was the sight of him sitting at his desk, at Republican eastern headquarters, here in Manhattan, pretending to take orders from his nominal chieftain, Doc. Herbert Work, who never learned half as much about politics in all his threescore and eight years as John Q. forgot in the last minute and a half.

When Herbert Hoover was nominated for president and went to Palo Alto, to make his acceptance speech, whom did he take along with him?—to tell him what to say?—and what not to say?

Doc Work?—his campaign manager. Not so you could not tell it. It was John Q. he took. Who has since been called down for repeatedly giving out the wrong kind of publicity, at the wrong time and in the wrong place? Tilson? Far from it. John Q. is much too wise a bird. Doc Work.

John Q. Tilson is just one almost incredibly foxy old grandpa.

Not altogether to his own advantage, he is also an exceedingly lively party-loyal old sent. He might have been nominated for vice president last June if he had made an ugly enough fight. He wanted to be. But it interfered with the organization's plan. So he modestly stepped aside. And now he is working for "the ticket" to beat all git-out.

You hear more about Senator Moses, as the Republicans' eastern manager."

Take it from me— If you want to reach the G. O. P.'s eastern managerial department, ask for John Q.'s desk.

The truth is, Congressman Tilson's job as majority floor boss in the house of representatives is the bushel under which he has been compelled to hide himself. Lesser lights drive up at the White House entrance with a flourish of trumpets, and all the correspondents sent our word: "So-and-so, has just called on the president," and it makes a big splash—though the correspondents, in reality, know that it means nothing whatever.

But when John Q. drops in, it is so genuinely important that it would start a monstrous rout if anybody learned that he had visited the president at all. Consequently he has to sneak in via the rearway, and nobody knows that anything has happened until the "accomplished fact"—as diplomats call it—is announced. And then somebody else claims all the credit for that. That is, that is what follows if it is creditable. If not, Tilson is welcome to whatever there is.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Try to Please Everybody?— Better Stop It Right Now

The person that tries to please everyone ends by pleasing no one, not even himself. A certain amount of compliance with the views of those one has to live with is necessary in order to get along, but when one constantly tries to revamp one's life to suit the whims of relatives, friends or sweethearts too easily, one stands by those you do make, unless you have good grounds for giving them up.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl 22 years old. When I was 19 I went with a boy and became engaged to him. My people made fun of him until I turned against him. A few months later I began going with a young man of the same name and age who is distinctly related. I hadn't gone with him very long before my people objected because we were third cousins. We were engaged and he gave me a very beautiful diamond. I felt that I couldn't live without him so I wrote and asked him if he would keep the ring a while and not come any more for awhile. I thought it would help us if he kept the ring until I got ready to go with him where ever he wanted me to. But instead of doing what I asked he got drunk and came over and took everything he had given me and told me he was going to another country. I called him up but he didn't seem to want to talk with me. That broke my heart. Please advise me what to do. Must I try to forget, or just live a miserable life?"

"WORRIED." I think you should assert yourself and marry the man you love and pay no attention to relatives, at least until they have better grounds for their objection to your sweetheart than the relationship. Third cousins are not considered relatives.

The fact that he drinks to excess would be much more of an objection in my estimation. But perhaps he only did that once to show you that you could not trifle with him.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 16. Do you think there is 'love at first sight'? There was a tent show in our community and the first night he sat with me and after the show he wanted to take me home, and I said 'No.' Then I went the next night and he just said he was glad I came back. I thought I would go back the next night and say good-bye, but I didn't get to go. He left now, about six miles from here. Please tell me how I can get in touch with him or what to do. Do you think it is wrong to flirt or pet?"

"LONELY LOU." He can easily find someone who knows you and get an introduction if he wants to, and that would show that he is the right kind of a man. Flirting and petting are not wrong, merely a bit cheap.

Steak en Casserole—One pound round steak (medium thick), one-half cup flour, two eggs, one teaspoon salt, two cups water, onion cut fine, two cups water. Place the meat, which has been wiped with damp cloth, on a meat board. Cut into four pieces. Pound the flour into the meat on both sides. In a heavy skillet put two tablespoons fat and a little salt. When very hot add the meat and brown on both sides. Place meat in a buttered casserole. Put salt, pepper and water in skillet in which the meat was browned. When boiling pour over the meat, add onion, and bake in a slow oven about an hour. If more gravy is needed on meat add a little more flour and water.

feathers are so thick and oily that not a drop of water can squeeze through them, let it try as it will. "So that is the reason you can weather a storm, because your wings are so strong, and your feathers are so thick," remarked Cormorant, thoughtfully. "Just the same, I should think you would be glad when the wind and the rain are over. It must be so much nicer sailing in clear skies. So do I imagine it or is it letting up a bit?"

"I haven't the least doubt but that you are," returned Albatross, politely. "You must not feel badly, though, that I can beat you at it. There is no bird in the world that I know of that can hold his own with me."

"I am the dauntless aviator of the sea. My wings are large, as you may have noticed—I believe that they measure something like eleven feet from tip to tip, and I have been told that there are more flight feathers on them than upon the wings of any other bird."

"You aren't getting wet a bit, interrupted Cormorant, who had been noticing this odd fact for a long while and couldn't resist speaking about it any longer.

"You let I am not," cried Albatross. "How could I, when my

COACH BEALE WHIPS CADETS INTO CONDITION FOR OPENER

Handicapped by the fact only a few of the seniors are eligible as candidates for the team, W. P. Beale, Cleveland, O., newly appointed football coach at the O. S. and S. O. Home is making strenuous efforts to whip the available material into shape for the opening game of the season with Wilmington High School at Wilmington Thursday afternoon.

A football eleven must be selected from about twenty boys who turned out for the squad. Coach Beale has four veterans around him to build his team and two of these are suffering from minor injuries, although they are expected to play Thursday.

The new athletic instructor attended both Ohio State University and Western Reserve University. He served as assistant coach at East Tech High School, Cleveland, and last year coached at Collingwood High School there. As supervisor of a community center, he also had sixty-two basketball teams under his direction at Cleveland.

He expects to put the Home on the sporting map, hoping to organize a track team and build up other sports.

The football schedule arranged for the coming season includes seven or eight games, three at home and games with Central High and East High and Lebanon.

Other first grayhounds coming with them are: Cool Carross, Go Clinker, Gun Shy, Royal Ridge, Buck Hawk, Glenn Hunter, Master Oscillator, Watch Him Go, Broad Education, Red Arcadian, Capt. Badge and over three hundred more of the fleetest available from the best courses in the United States.

The management also announces a decided improvement in the starting boxes and also the banking of the two curves which it is felt will meet the hearty approval of patrons.

Parking facilities have been improved, and the official register has been slightly changed with further announcement later.

Other special changes have been made which surprises will be held for opening night.

Late Urban Shocker, Veteran Pitcher, Played Too Hard Is Said.

HE WAS RECOGNIZED FROM 1921 TO 1924 AS ONE OF THE BEST PITCHERS IN THE GAME

By JACK SORDS
Sports Cartoonist-Writer for Central Press and The Gazette.
It was his fighting spirit and his strong desire to win that gave Shocker an early death. He had pitched professional ball for six years, and every minute of his playing time saw him giving his utmost to his team. He outdid himself, overstrained his body, and as a result developed the dreaded "athletic heart," fearful nemesis of athletes who play too hard.

Next to Ed Walsh, Urban Shocker is considered the greatest of all spitball pitchers. He was a keen student of the game and enjoyed it the most when the going was the toughest. Shocker began his major league career in 1916 and, but for the time spent in the service during the World War, played continuously until last July.

The greatest mistake in the career of the Yankees was made when they traded Shocker to St. Louis in 1917. However, the New York club got him back years later and he ended his playing days in Gotham.

The Cincinnati Reds—bearing one of the oldest and most honored names in baseball history from the days of 1869—came into their own for a year in the season of 1919.

Little did members of the team or the baseball public at large realize that while the team was fighting its way to its first championship in the modern era the success which was to top this season was to be besmirched by a few short months later by the "Black Sox" expose—which was to leave the victory of the Reds in the world's series of 1919 a hollow mockery.

The Reds' victory came just fifty years after the famous "Red Stockings," the first salaried baseball team ever organized, had set an unbeatable record by playing through their first season undefeated. From the organization of the National League in 1876, the Cincinnati fans had waited patiently for a pennant winner. Only once in the forty-three years had a Cincinnati team landed as high as second. That had been back in 1878.

Manager Pat Moran had a great pitching staff in 1919 and a good all-around team.

Moran had the boys hustling from the start. The club took the lead at the opening of the season, and held it for a couple of weeks, and then relinquished it to the Brooklyn Dodgers for a few days, only to see the Dodgers eased out by the Giants.

John McGraw's team held the top round until the first week in July while the Reds were fighting off the attacks of the other clubs to shove the Redlegs out of first division. Around the first of August, McGraw's team took the lead, and it again to the Giants and the last of the month—to hold it to the finish.

Superb pitching by Dutch Ruether, Slim Salloe, Ray Fisher, Hod Eller, Adolphe Luque and Jimmy Ring, timely and versatile batting and Moran's astute handling of the team turned the trick. The club led the league in sacrifice hitting while ranking second in team batting.

You probably recall most of the other members of the team—Dauhart at first, Rath at second, Kopf at short, Groh at third, Roush, Duncan and Neale in the outfield, Wingo and Rariden catching.

In the American League the White Sox, checked in their efforts to beat the Red Sox in 1918, had their eyes on the pennant. And what a team they had!

Oscar Felsch in center—then rated as one of the greatest if not the best pitcher in the game—led the team in 1919. He was a keen student of the game and enjoyed it the most when the going was the toughest.

Shocker began his major league career in 1916 and, but for the time spent in the service during the World War, played continuously until last July.

STATE COMMISSION WILL HEAR REQUEST TO ABANDON S. & X.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 12.—The State Utilities Commission, on being informed that the Springfield and Xenia Railway Co., even under new management, is unable to conduct operations without loss, this afternoon set October 11 at 10 a. m. as the time for hearing the company's plea to abandon the line.

Application for abandonment was made several months ago but since that time new management took charge, believing that possibly the company, if properly operated, might pay, but this proved a failure.

COOLIDGE TO LEAVE FOR NEW ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—President Coolidge will leave here tonight for a two-day trip to New England, the greater part of which will be spent in Vermont where he will inspect progress of rehabilitation of last fall's flood area.

Mrs. Coolidge will accompany the president as far as Northampton, Mass., where she will visit her mother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, critically ill in a hospital there. Attorney General Sargeant will accompany the president.

Mr. Coolidge will return to Washington early Saturday.

ONE for the BOOK

It was in the club house at Brae Burn during the national amateur.

Spectators were almost as nervous as freshmen entrants in the big classic. There was a lot of suppressed excitement.

A friend spotted Harrison Johnston, the boy star, who played golf in the first qualifying round, and went over to him. Johnston was enjoying his lunch.

"How do you stand, Jimmy, old kid," said the friend, banging Johnston on the shoulder.

"I'm all right so far," Johnston grinned back. "I start off in 20 minutes."

When you get through laughing over that one read on:

Two of the players who had turned in scores that looked like the ringside weights of a couple of circus elephants came trooping in to the clubhouse.

Sadness drooped in every line of their features. They were silent for a long while.

"Well," one finally said, "We had a nice day for it."

Ritticisms
BY BILL RITT
Homer, the first sports editor, believed all fights were on the level. History says he was blind.

So everything he wrote was by hearsay, which qualified him as a modern expert.

At that, he never let a story get by. He covered everything from Horatius' hemlock handicap to Helen's big date at Troy.

It's a big story broke that Homer didn't get it, it appeared in another century.

The boy knew how to write. Though he's been doing hard and stylish. When Homer got through his duty for over 2,000 years they still read his stuff.

He certainly pounded a mean writing up a war not even the generals recognized it.

He mixed his metaphors and added his adjectives until he had the big boys fooled. They couldn't read it, so they thought it was important.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 12.—Governor Donahoe today issued requisition papers for Lovada Boyle, Oil City, Pa., wanted in Akron for the shooting of Robert McCormick. The girl, who was a "hiker," was under arrest at Oil City, Pa., and has admitted the shooting, claiming that McCormick attempted to attack her after she had accepted a ride in his car near Talmadge, Ohio, police said.

The charge in the extradition request submitted by Prosecutor Hunsicker of Summit County was second degree murder.

GANGSTER KINGS

Mystery Death Of "Big Jim" Colosimo Climaxes Rise From Poverty To Wealth

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of six stories on the leading gangsters of Chicago, their colorful histories, and their manner of meeting death. Obtained for Central Press and The Gazette by Bonita Witt, star girl writer, the articles present interesting and intimate pictures of the lives of the leaders of gang warfare in Chicago.)

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 19.—Oursunny day, not so many years ago, a black-haired Italian boy, 18-year-old James Colosimo, left his beloved Italy for America to claim one of the fortunes some folk of his country believed could be had for the asking.

But the streets of gold he sought eluded him, and Jim Colosimo obtained work as a section hand. Although he lived in a smelly box car and ate rough food his thoughts were always of the day when he would be rich. Gradually he mastered the English language.

Intrigued by stories he had heard of Chicago, he moved there from the east, and sent for his sweetheart in Italy. Ward bosses soon came to know the energetic young Italian, and he became a precinct worker.

Opened Gambling Resort
After his wedding "Big Jim," as he had come to be known, and his bride, opened a saloon and resort, which thrived under the financial wizardry of "Mrs. Jim." Gambling tables, at which thousands were won and lost, were a part of the Colosimo establishment.

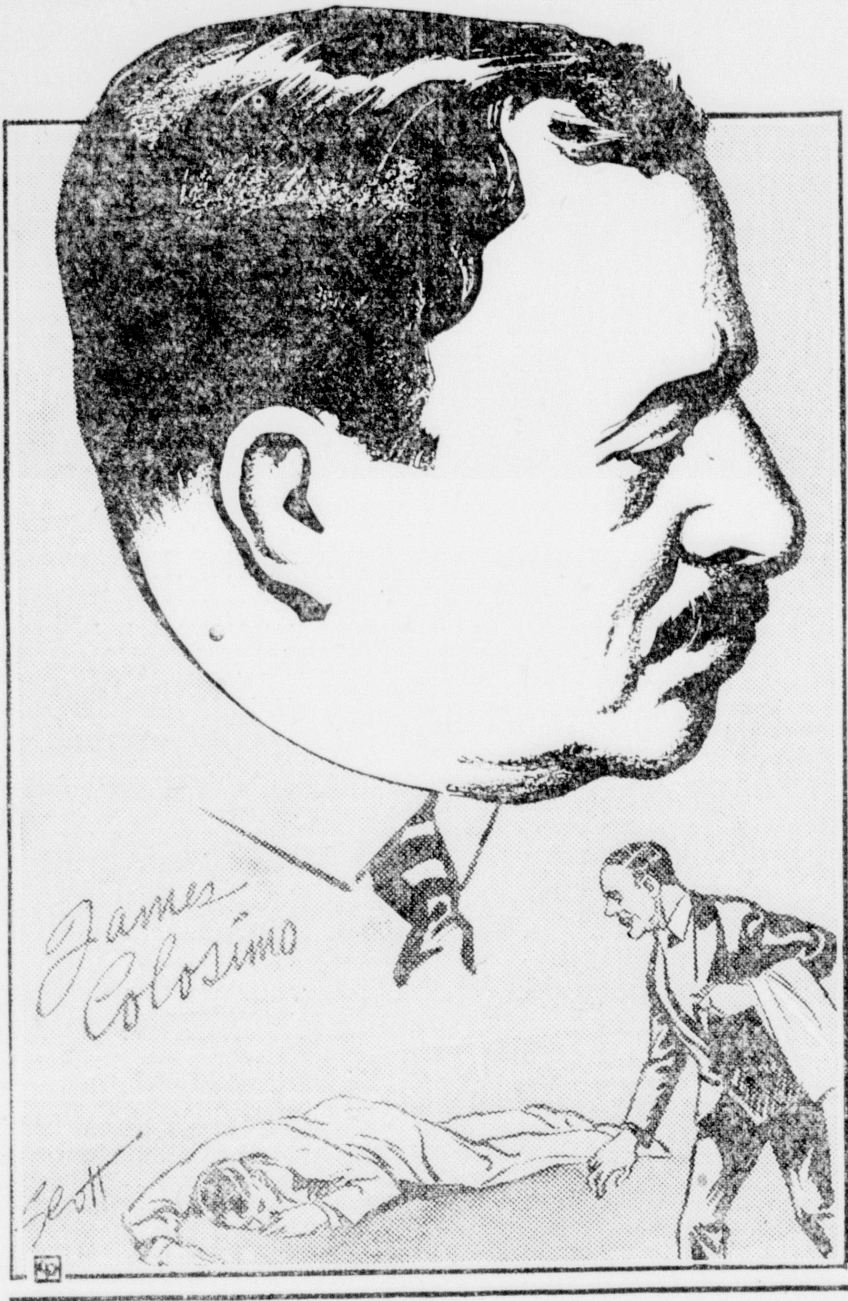

Then came a disagreement with the police—Colosimo's place was closed, and he retaliated by swinging the voice in his district away from the mayor with whom he had quarreled. With the advent of "Big Bill" Thompson as mayor, Colosimo was given another license, and he opened a cafe which was the pride of his existence and a gathering place for the politicians and socially elite, as well as the underworld.

Well, chaperoned debutantes rubbed elbows with gunmen, and were thrilled by the experience. Colosimo became fabulously wealthy, but the gold which he had sought since his boyhood led to his estrangement from his wife, and a divorce followed.

Won Cabaret Singer
Passing weeks brought the genial cafe host new happiness—the love of the most beautiful and talented entertainer in his restaurant, Dale Winter, who gave up singing in churches because she could earn higher wages at Colosimo's. To Colosimo she represented the culture and refinement which he sought. After a rapid courtship they eloped and were married at French Lick, Ind.

Wealth, love, power, contentment—all these were "Big Jim's." Behind him were the days of the saloon in the tenderloin. He showered gifts upon his bride, and decked himself in jewels. He owned one seven-carat diamond and three one-carat gems were set in the gold clasp of his garters. On each of his suspenders there were three diamonds, and the elastic straps were interwoven with gold.

"Big Jim" was on his way "to be somebody," and the underworld was resentful. A police captain, in discussing Colosimo with me once said: "As soon as Jim began 'putting on the dog' I knew he'd be shot."

Then one day "Big Jim" went to his cafe in the early afternoon, when its dining room was deserted save for a lone diner. A few minutes later an employe, hearing two shots which he believed to be automobile tire blowouts, went to the front door to investigate, and found his employer stretched on the floor in a pool of blood—dead. The lone diner had disappeared.

Why was he killed? Who killed him? The police admitted they were baffled. Was it the Black Hand, that dread society which terrorizes Chicago's Italian colonies, or was it a former lover of Dale Winter? Was it a member of an underworld gang, jealous of "Big Jim's" power and wealth?

"Big Jim" was laid to rest in a $2,500 bronze casket, and the underworld mourned the loss of one of its most colorful members. Perhaps it knew who fired the bullets which took his life; but then, the underworld does not tell.

FIELDS NEED AID

Hauling green corn from the field to the silo is an expensive part of the storage of silage, and the distance which the corn must be transported has much to do with the cost of the silage, especially in hilly country.

Where only a single field is located near the silo, the question arises as to whether silage corn can be grown upon it each year. On the Belmont County Experiment Farm a block of land near the silo has been growing silage corn continuously since 1917. Walter Mahan, superintendent of the farm and J. S. Cutler, assistant in agronomy at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, have reported on results of the practice.

Their conclusion is that where silage corn is to be grown continuously on one field, the fertility program should be so planned as to meet the fertilizer needs of the crop and at the same time maintain the supply of organic matter in the soil. Such a program should include the liberal application of well-rotted manure, together with both broadcast and hill or row fertilizer applications for corn and the growing of some sort of cover crop on the land over winter.

A fertilizer treatment of eight or ten tons of manure and a broadcast application of 200 to 250 pounds per acre of 20 per cent superphosphate and a row application of 100 or 200 pounds of complete fertilizer with a formula of 2-10-6, is suggested. Such cover crops as rye and rye and vetch, have proved satisfactory.

Keep Your Motor
Running Smooth
With Eldred Pennsylvania Oil

The market is flooded with so-called lubricants having all the appearance of good oil, but containing few of the essentials required for the lubrication of an automobile engine. These poor oils allow motor bearings, cylinders, and timing gears to become worn and noisy, hastening the depreciation of your car. Such oils are expensive at any price.

Lock the stable before the horse is stolen. Use EL-DRED 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oils in the crank case of your motor to protect its working parts against heat and friction. The results will please you. The price is right.

Through an oversight, no decision was rendered as to rents and profits. The appellate court, in its corrected decision, held that the rents and profits upon the share of the estate received by the children and heirs of Henry Hanes should be accounted to them, beginning in the year 1925, excepting the wheat crop cut and harvested in that year.

The Theater

The increasing demands of American managers for the rights to English plays has brought forth a vigorous protest from St. John Ervine, celebrated English author.

Calling attention to the serious nature of the situation he warns that unless the American managers are "put in their proper place" the West End of London will become a suburb of Broadway.

It is, of course, an acknowledged fact that in his struggle to achieve fame it is necessary for the English author to "play-up" to the American theater. Not only does he secure more money for his plays in America, but their success there usually reassures their production in London.

Thus the English author is forced to pay heed to the demands of the American manager.

"O WORLD, BE NOBLER"

O WORLD, be nobler, for her sake!

If she but knew thee what thou art,

What wrongs are borne, what deeds are done

In thee, beneath thy daily sun.

Know'st thou not that her tender heart

For pain and very shame would break?

O World, be nobler, for her sake!

SMITH FAVORS McNARY - HAUGEN BILL RELIEF WORK RUSHED TO STRICKEN CITIES WHEN WIND RECEDES

ENDORSES MEASURE IN OPENING SPEECH IN OMAHA NEBRASKA

Governor Answers Questions In "Ad"; Sees McMullen

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 19.—Governor Alfred E. Smith resumed his campaign through the western farm belt today after a rather sensational start in his opening speech here last night, in which he not only gave what farm leaders consider an open endorsement of the McNary-Haugen principle but re-emphasized his prohibition views in an unscheduled discussion of this subject in this normally dry state.

The Democratic candidate was to leave here today headed for Oklahoma City, where he speaks Thursday night. He will interrupt his journey at Lincoln, Neb., for a conference with Gov. Adam McMullen, a farm leader, and later for frequent appearances as he passes through Kansas.

His opening speech last night was typical of the Smith New York knows, and set the tone of his campaign definitely as a brown-eyed candidate, talked to the crowd of 10,000 in the Omaha auditorium in his breezy, theatrical way, and then proved he was the same Smith for whom New York has shown such a fondness by striking boldly at a challenge issued to him on his entry into this state.

He concluded his speech on farm relief, which in itself was a surprise, and then answered eight questions propounded to him in a newspaper advertisement which stated him in the face in every newspaper he picked up here.

Having answered them in his own way, he then suggested playfully that Herbert Hoover be asked the same questions.

Considerable significance is being attached to Smith's conference in Lincoln today with McMullen, who gave Hoover a conditioned endorsement and announced he was waiting for the Democratic candidate's Omaha speech before deciding his course definitely. McMullen invited the New York governor to visit him at the capitol.

Democratic leaders place much hope in Smith's declaration last night of the McNary-Haugen bill, but it was not entirely clear to some observers as to just how far he went, since he did not endorse the equalization fee, the "heart" of that measure, by name, but said the methods and mechanics of the measure would be left open. Republicans regarded it as a skillful pronouncement.

By emphasizing his prohibition modification stand, Smith touched a friendly spot in the heart of the large foreign population in this state, which is predominantly "wet." A large percentage of the German and Bohemian votes is conceded to him. There are 300,000 Germans in the state and about 200,000 Bohemians, while other foreign nationalities are well represented.

ORDER DOOLITTLE TO NEW YORK FIELD

DAYTON, O., Sept. 19.—Lieutenant James N. Doolittle, of Wright Field, received yesterday orders transferring him to Mitchell Field, New York, effective at once. He recently returned from South America and is one of the best known pilots in the army air service.

Col. Horace A. Mann has been named southern division manager of Herbert Hoover's presidential campaign by the Republican national committee.

Held in Shooting

Loveday Boyle, 18-year-old divorcee of Cranberry, Pa., has been held by police following the shooting of Robert McCormick, a motorist, near Akron, O. Police said the girl admitted shooting McCormick in self-defense when he and a companion tried to attack her after giving her a "lift" on a country road. Miss Boyle was "hitch-hiking" her way home from Okmulgee, Okla., when she was picked up by McCormick, who died of his wounds.

HOOVER CONSIDERS POLITICAL STATUS IN SOUTHERN AREAS

Plans Conference With Delegation From Texas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Back from his two day motor trip through northern New Jersey, Herbert Hoover today centered his attention upon the political situation in the south. Arrangements were made for him to receive personal reports of the Texas situation from R. B. Creager, Texas Republican national committee-man, who is bringing five Texans here to confer with the presidential nominee.

Hoover has heard little of Texas developments since his visit to New Mexico four weeks ago when he received word from George Monary, El Paso banker, that Republican leaders were laying plans designed to carry this rock-ridden Democratic state.

Reports concerning conditions in other sections of the south are to be given the nominee by Col. Horace Mann, in charge of the southern campaign.

Hoover's next speech is scheduled for October 6, at Elizabethton, Tenn., advance men will be sent there next week to arrange for a hurried trip. The present schedule calls for only a three-hour stop at Elizabethton. Hoover intends to go directly there and return by the same direct rail route with no stops other than those arranged by the railroad for railroad purposes.

His family desires that he take a few days off the latter part of this week and make the fishing trip he has so often postponed.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—The tropical disturbance which passed over Florida, Georgia and South Carolina seemed well on its way to ship lanes of the Atlantic today with diminished intensity.

Of the three states, Florida felt the effects of the hurricane worst. Reports from the Georgia and South Carolina coast, over which the storm passed today, were that damage was slight, although communication was cut off for several hours and highways and railway tracks were in some cases impassable.

No deaths were reported north of Palatka, the storm apparently confined its devastations to property.

COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER AIR PORT IN XENIA

Merchants Confer With Visitors; Discuss Site

Discussion of the possibility of establishing an airport in Xenia featured the meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Tuesday night.

Three men who contemplate leasing a seventy-five acre tract of land in or near Xenia as a site for an airport, explained their views at the meeting.

Those interested in the proposal are J. W. Dietz, Dayton, airplane builder; A. E. Longstrech, Osborn, aerial photographer, and Clarence Shade, Osborn, parachute jumper.

It is the intention or hope of these men to lease suitable land here to organize a training school of aviation. They declared that from twelve to fifteen scholars who desire to learn to fly is a sufficient number for all practical purposes.

It was pointed out that no training schools are located closer to Xenia than Dayton or Springfield and location of an airport here would be more convenient to Xenians. They declared that several Xenians had already expressed their desire to learn the flying game if an airport could be located here.

The sponsors of the plans told the association that in many cases the city purchased a suitable tract of land, leased it to a group of citizens or a civic organization, which in turn leased it for an airport.

The association agreed to appoint a committee which will cooperate with a committee recently appointed by directors of the Greene County Auto Club to investigate the feasibility of the plan.

The recent committee appointed is composed of R. A. Kelly, C. W. Murphy and Theophil G. White. This committee's duty is to interview Xenians and civic bodies to learn what local sentiment prevails with regard to the proposal.

Possibility of an airport for Xenia was called to the attention of the auto club by C. W. Murphy, Deliver Belden, auto club secretary and Theophil G. White, as a result of questionnaires sent out by the aircraft division of the Ford Motor Co., Detroit.

If an airport is established here it would be available as a landing field for all planes passing over the city. Similar cities the size of Xenia, including Urbana, Lebanon and Greenville, have such facilities.

SLAYER INDICTED IN SECOND DEGREE

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—Michael "Mike the Pipe" Shinkman, alleged slayer of Philip "Fanny Face" Corry, today was to be served with an indictment charging second degree murder in connection with the killing.

The indictment was returned late Tuesday, according to Assistant County Prosecutor Donald Kennedy, after the grand jury reported that it found insufficient evidence upon which to base a first degree murder indictment.

For its last three minutes and a half, it was packed with thrills which brought the first night audience whooping to its feet.

All the glamor and drama and action of a heavyweight championship fight were packed into the last few minutes of the otherwise sorry little play in which Jack and his wife, Estelle Taylor, are co-starring—their first joint effort upon the legitimate stage.

Dempsey, lithe and brown and grim, brought an appreciative yell of delight from the audience when he stripped off his familiar white sweater and flannel trousers and stepped forth in the red and black trunks he wore in his last ring battles.

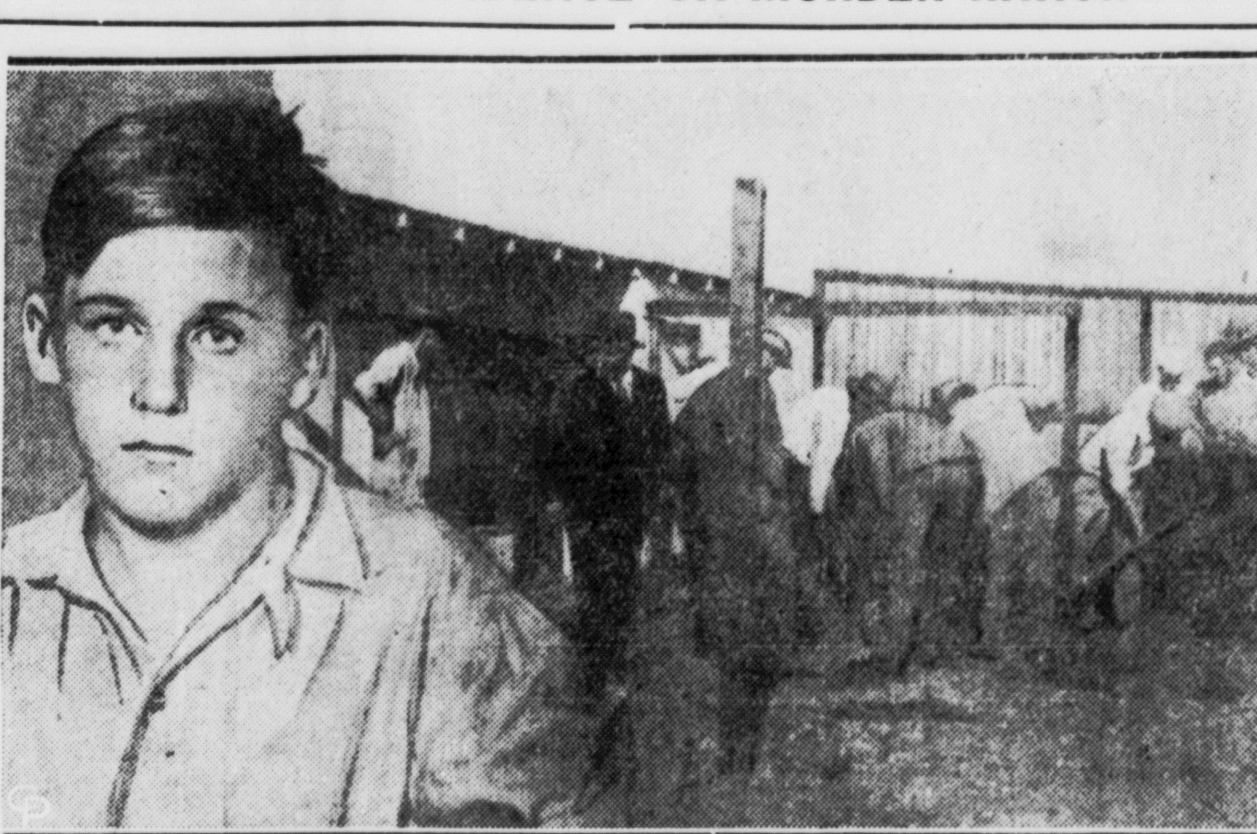

And what Dempsey does to the unfortunate "batting baker" of the play is a caution. The management of "The Big Fight" advises us that this part will be played by relays of actors. It is likely that they will run out of actors sooner than of cash customers for the knockout wallop which the champion shot over last night was closer to the real thing than many seen in the prize ring.

It took Dempsey about half a minute of the second round of a truly stirring battle to drape the ponderous form of Ralph Smith, who plays the part of "Batting Baker" inert across the canvas.

Smith lay there as though happy that it was all over. In his ring days, Jack of Manassas never learned to pull a punch, and he apparently hasn't learned the art since he turned actor.

Otherwise, the play is pretty thin stuff. Estelle, lovely and an actress to the finger tips, (she plays the part of a poor but honest maid) has broken her engagement to her beloved Jack and is being courted by "Steve Logan," who is in some ways a prototype

POLICE SEEK EVIDENCE ON MURDER RANCH

Central Press telephoto of deputy sheriffs digging for evidence to corroborate a story of boy murders on the chicken ranch of Stuart G. Northcott, at Wineville, near Los Angeles, Cal., as told by Sanford Clark, 15, left, a nephew of Northcott's, who has told police that he witnessed the alleged slayings. Investigators have uncovered bits of evidence in the form of bones, some of which experts believe may be those of victims. Northcott and his mother, Mrs. Louisa Northcott, have been sought for questioning in western Canada by police.

MERCHANTS FAVOR CITY OWNED ELECTRIC PLANT

Retail Body Submits Petitions To City Commission Requesting Action; City Defers Action On Rate Schedule.

Agitation for establishment of a municipal light plant for Xenia was revived Wednesday when petitions containing the signatures of 124 local merchants, endorsing the action of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association, declaring in favor of a city-owned light plant for Xenia were filed with City Commission, which met in special session at noon.

The petition requested that the commission investigate such a plant and "present to the citizens of Xenia a suitable plan of procedure to obtain a municipal plant for Xenia."

Decision to circulate the petitions was reached at a meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Tuesday night. The association has a membership of about eighty business men who have declared in favor of a municipal lighting system for the city.

Commission placed the petition on file for future consideration and voted to commend the association for the interest it had taken in the present controversy.

DEMPSEY AND ESTELLE HAVE SORRY PLAY UNTIL LAST THREE MINUTES

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—For two hours and a half, "The Big Fight" which brought Jack Dempsey back to Broadway last night, was tiresome melodrama.

For its last three minutes and a half, it was packed with thrills which brought the first night audience whooping to its feet.

All the glamor and drama and action of a heavyweight championship fight were packed into the last few minutes of the otherwise sorry little play in which Jack and his wife, Estelle Taylor, are co-starring—their first joint effort upon the legitimate stage.

Dempsey, lithe and brown and grim, brought an appreciative yell of delight from the audience when he stripped off his familiar white sweater and flannel trousers and stepped forth in the red and black trunks he wore in his last ring battles.

And what Dempsey does to the unfortunate "batting baker" of the play is a caution. The management of "The Big Fight" advises us that this part will be played by relays of actors. It is likely that they will run out of actors sooner than of cash customers for the knockout wallop which the champion shot over last night was closer to the real thing than many seen in the prize ring.

It took Dempsey about half a minute of the second round of a truly stirring battle to drape the ponderous form of Ralph Smith, who plays the part of "Batting Baker" inert across the canvas.

Smith lay there as though happy that it was all over. In his ring days, Jack of Manassas never learned to pull a punch, and he apparently hasn't learned the art since he turned actor.

Commission deferred passage of a maximum rate ordinance requested by The Dayton Power and Light Co. through J. C. Matthieu, vice president, until its next regular meeting, September 27.

The company proposes to file with the Utilities Commission upon passage of the ordinance raising the present minimum rate charged from 50 cents to 75 cents, a reduced schedule of commercial and domestic light rates for Xenia, to remain in effect until expiration of the present contract.

The First Citizens Corp., Columbus, and the Xenia National Bank, also made bids.

STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR PROPOSES RELIEF FOR MINERS

Ask Contributions For Relief Of Ohio Strikers

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—A plea for the organization of a state relief system for striking miners in Ohio was made in a resolution read before the Ohio State Federation of Labor in convention here.

The resolution asked sister organizations in the federation to assist in obtaining contributions to help the miners through the winter.

The miners have "battled" seven months to uphold the principle of collective bargaining and thousands of their families are suffering as a result, the resolution said.

Although the miners have adopted a new scale accepting reductions in wages and granting concessions in working conditions many employers have refused their overtures, the resolution declared.

Other resolutions introduced and read include: one requesting legislation for a pension fund for school custodians; another requesting legislation banning the import of prison made goods into Ohio from other states; a third requesting legislation banning the use of compressed air paint machines in Ohio and another appealing to federal members to use and purchase only union labeled goods and merchandise.

Seven residents on the northern lake shore were still reported missing today. The number of persons who lost their lives along the eastern shore of the lake could not be estimated accurately, although it was reported that seventy-five had died.

Searching parties are being sent to the settlements on the lake shore.

NEW YORK PREPARES TO RECEIVE STORM; SHIPPING WARNED

Hurricane Has Lost Some Intensity In Trip North

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—New York prepared to receive a taste of the West Indies hurricane late today. Weather bureau advisories warning shipping between Cape Hatteras and southern New England were ordered.

The storm, somewhat lessened in intensity after its long path of devastation was due to pass over Atlantic City in the late afternoon or early evening.

Northeast gale warnings were predicted all along the coast and high seas along the coastline were predicted. New York City itself felt the first hint of bad weather today in decreased temperature and cloudiness. Rain fell during the night.

The center of the disturbance is expected to pass over the Atlantic before it reached the latitude of New York but the hurricane has already fooled the weather men once. When the storm made for the east coast of Florida it was predicted it would cross the state and strike the southern edges of Georgia and Alabama. But the hurricane took a twist east and traveled north to Savannah and Charleston where its force was sufficient to halt wire communication and cause torrential rainfall.

Into the storm will sail the U. S. S. Bridge, carrying nearly 2,500,000 pounds of relief foodstuffs for Porto Rico. The ship, probably will feel the force of the blow tonight.

Strong winds, whipping the harbor, blew the Standard Oil tanker "Christy Payne" across Kill Van Kull, grounding her on Staten Island.

Eight tugs pulled the ship off into deep water within a half hour and she proceeded upstream under her own power, apparently undamaged.

REPORT 660 DIED IN GUADELOUPE

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The West Indian hurricane took 660 lives in the French colony of Guadeloupe, the ministry of colonies was advised today.

The ministry has begun organizing relief work to feed and shelter the thousands of homeless and prevent epidemics by spraying the ruins of the towns and villages with disinfectant.

SUPPLIES SENT TO BAHAMA ISLANDS

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 19.—Food and medical supplies were sent by schooner to Bimini, Bahama Islands, today, as word reached here by radio of extensive hurricane damage there.

According to tropical radio, homes and churches were damaged and vessels in the harbor wrecked. No loss of life was reported but it appeared to be considerable suffering among homeless.

RELIEF ARRIVES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The destroyer Gilmer with Red Cross disaster workers and relief supplies aboard, arrived at San Juan, Porto Rico, shortly after midnight today, the navy department has been advised.

The Gilmer left Charleston, S. C., at 2 a. m. Saturday.

Palm Beaches And Lake Okeechobee Worst Hit

By UNITED PRESS

The remnant of the tropical hurricane which struck Porto Rico Thursday was scudding out to sea today after it had climbed up the Atlantic seaboard as far as the Virginia Capes.

The disturbance which is now cutting across Atlantic steamship lanes is only a breath of wind compared to the gale that landed with terrific force on Palm Beach, Fla., cut across the peninsula and then veered off toward the eastern coast again.

With the partial restoration of communication lines, the relief work was speeded today, and reports indicate that food and medicine were needed badly in Florida and Porto Rico.

Governor Horace N. Towner of Porto Rico, in a dispatch written for the United Press, said he could give no definite estimate of number of lives lost. He did say, however, that present reports did not warrant placing the fatality list as high as 1,000.

The first official Red Cross report was brought in on the Florida death toll, and showed that 400 persons had lost their lives, most of them in the Palm Beaches and the Lake Okeechobee area.

The nation opened its pocketbook, and thousands of dollars were pouring into the headquarters of relief agencies. Railroads in Florida co-operated in the work by furnishing free transportation to physicians and nurses.

The after effects of the hurricane were felt as far north as New York where rain fell last night and the temperature dropped.

SEBRING, Fla., Sept. 19.—Col. L. S. Lowry, Florida National Guard, in charge of relief work in the Okeechobee Lake area, estimated after a survey today that the hurricane death list may reach 500.

J. T. Lurvey of the Tampa Red Cross chapter, in charge of that organization's work in the area, concurred with Lowry.

Their estimates were based on a survey of the towns along the Lake Okeechobee, where waves similar to an ocean tidal wave devastated such settlements as Belle Glade, Pahokee and Canal Point.

Days and possibly weeks, Col. Lowry said, will be required to determine correctly the number of dead, injured and missing in the section.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Red Cross headquarters were advised today that the West Indies hurricane left a toll in Palm Beach County, Florida of 400 dead, 15,000 homeless, and property damage of $30,000,000.

This word, sent by Howard W. Selby, chairman of the county Red Cross chapter, and James H. Gilman, chapter disaster chairman, laid the 9,000 persons were being fed at organized refugee camps in the county, and that 8,000 persons were without change of clothing because the storm had swept their belongings away.

"Food and water conditions satisfactory so far," the message said. "Temporary shelter is so far satisfactory. Sanitary conditions good along coast, but becoming very serious in western half of county."

The hurricane, which devastated portions of the West Indies and Florida, was centered today between Raleigh and Cape Hatteras, N. C., moving northeastward or possibly north northeastward, the weather bureau advised.

"Whole gale" warnings, indicating a wind velocity of slightly less than the hurricane itself, were posted from Cape Hatteras to Provincetown, Mass., and ordinary storm warnings north of that point to Eastport, Me.

SORDS POINTS

Late Urban Shocker, Veteran Pitcher, Played Too Hard Is Said.

HE WAS RECOGNIZED FROM 1921 TO 1924 AS ONE OF THE BEST PITCHERS IN THE GAME

By JACK SORDS
Sports Cartoonist-Writer for Central Press and The Gazette.

Just a few hours before the crucial series between the Yankees and Athletics began, Urban Shocker, a great name in Yankee baseball history, died in Denver, Col. Several days before Urban, at the death's door, had wired his old club his best wishes and regret that he couldn't aid them in the big fight.

And now he's dead. It was his fighting spirit and his strong desire to win that gave Shocker an early death. He had pitched professional ball for sixteen years, and every minute of his playing time saw him giving his utmost to his team. He outdid himself, overstrained his body, and as a result developed the dreaded "athletic heart," fearful nemesis of athletes who play too hard.

Next to Ed Walsh, Urban Shocker is considered the greatest of all spitball pitchers. He was a keen student of the game and enjoyed it the most when the going was the toughest.

Shocker began his major league career in 1916 and, but for the time spent in the service during the World War, played continuously until last July.

The greatest mistake in the career of the Yankees was made when they traded Shocker to St. Louis in 1917. However, the New York club got him back years later and he ended his playing days in Gotham.

CENTRAL HIGH WILL PLAY HOME CADETS; ONE DATE CHANGED

The O. S. and S. O. Home has been added to the 1923 schedule of the Xenia Central High School football team, it is announced.

The Home will fill the open date on Friday, October 5 at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Addition of this game gives the Blue and White eleven ten games for the season, five at home and five away. The season's schedule is now complete.

This will mark the second time Xenia Central and the Home have met on the gridiron. The first meeting resulted in a victory for Central by an uncomfortably close margin several years ago.

It is also announced that Xenia's game with Wilmington High School at Wilmington, scheduled for Friday, November 23, has been moved up to Thursday, November 22. This change was made necessary because Wilmington High plays its home games on the Wilmington College gridiron and the college has a home game on November 23.

FOOTBALL SEASON IS APPROACHING

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—It's almost football time again!

Flags flying from huge concrete bowls, a mass of young college huskies down below charging at each other, now a row of wild cheering undergraduates and old grads—those sights will be seen each Saturday within a short time.

Although two nip and tuck major league baseball races down the home stretch have the almost undivided attention of the sporting world these mid-September days, football is slowly creeping back.

Reports from eastern college football training camps indicate that several teams are rapidly approaching playing form.

Thirty-four football games are scheduled Saturday over the United States, largely in the south, southwest and far west. The eastern season will not open until a week from Saturday. All teams will be in action by Saturday, October 6.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 19.—The State Utilities Commission, on being informed that the Springfield and Xenia Railway Co., even under new management, is unable to conduct operations without loss, this afternoon set October 11 at 10 a. m., as the time for hearing the company's plea to abandon the line.

Application for abandonment was made several months ago but since that time new management took charge, believing that possibly the company, if properly operated, might pay, but this proved a failure.

ONE for the BOOK

It was in the club house at Brae Burn during the national amateur.

Spectators were almost as nervous as freshmen entrants in the big classic. There was a lot of suppressed excitement.

A friend spotted Harrison Johnston, the boy star, who played such sensational golf in the first qualifying round, and went over to him. Johnston was enjoying his lunch.

"How do you stand, Jimmy, old kid," said the friend, banging Johnston on the shoulder.

"I'm all right so far," Johnston grinned back. "I start off in 20 minutes."

When you get through laughing over that one read on:

Two of the players who had turned in scores that looked like the ringside weights of a couple of circus elephants came trooping in to the clubhouse.

Sadness drooped in every line of their features. They were silent for a long while.

"Well," one finally said, "We had a nice day for it."

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

Homer, the first sports editor, believed all fights were on the level. History says he was blind.

So everything he wrote was by hearsay, which qualified him as a modern expert.

At that, he never let a story get by. He covered everything from Socrates' hemlock handicap to Helen's big date at Troy.

If a big story broke that Homer didn't get, it appeared in another century.

The boy knew how to write. Though he's been doing harp and stylus, when Homer got through his duty for over 2,000 years they still read his stuff.

He certainly pounded a mean writing up a war not even the generals recognized it.

He mixed his metaphors and added his adjectives until he had the big boys fooled. They couldn't read it, so they thought it was important.

GANGSTER KINGS

Mystery Death Of "Big Jim" Colosimo Climaxes Rise From Poverty To Wealth

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of six stories on the leading gangsters of Chicago, their colorful histories, and their manner of meeting death. Obtained for Central Press and The Gazette by Bonita Witt, star girl writer, the articles present interesting and intimate pictures of the lives of the leaders of gang warfare in Chicago.)

By BONITA WITT Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 19.—One sunny day, not so many years ago, a black-haired Italian boy, 18-year-old James Colosimo, left his beloved Italy for America to claim one of the fortunes some folk of his country believed could be had for the asking.

But the streets of gold he sought eluded him, and Jim Colosimo obtained work as a section hand. Although he lived in a smelly box car and ate rough food his thoughts were always of the day when he would be rich. Gradually he mastered the English language.

Intrigued by stories he had heard of Chicago, he moved there from the east, and sent for his sweetheart in Italy. Ward bosses soon came to know the energetic young Italian, and he became a precinct worker.

Opened Gambling Resort. After his wedding "Big Jim," as he had come to be known, and his bride, opened a saloon and resort, which thrived under the financial wizardry of "Mrs. Jim." Gambling tables, at which thousands were won and lost, were a part of the Colosimo establishment.

Then came a disagreement with the police—Colosimo's place was closed, and he retaliated by swinging the votes in his district away from the mayor with whom he had quarreled. With the advent of "Big Bill" Thompson as mayor, Colosimo was given another license, and he opened a cafe which was the pride of his existence and a gathering place for the politicians and socially elite, as well as the underworld.

Well chaperoned debutantes rubbed elbows with gunmen, and were thrilled by the experience. Colosimo became fabulously wealthy, but the gold which he had sought since his boyhood led to his estrangement from his wife, and a divorce followed.

Won Cabaret Singer. Passing weeks brought the genial cafe host new happiness—the love of the most beautiful and talented entertainer in his restaurant, Dale Winter, who gave up singing in churches because she could earn higher wages at Colosimo's. To Colosimo she represented the culture and refinement which he sought. After a rapid courtship they eloped and were married at French Lick, Ind.

Wealth, love, power, contentment—all these were "Big Jim's." Behind him were the days of the saloon. In the tenderloin, he showered gifts upon his bride, and decked himself in jewels. He owned one seven-carat diamond and three one-carat gems were set in the gold clasp of his garters. On each of his suspenders there were three diamonds, and the elastic straps were interwoven with gold.

"Big Jim" was on his way "to be somebody," and the underworld was resentful. A police captain, in discussing Colosimo with me once said: "As soon as Jim began 'putting on the dog' I knew he'd be shot."

Then one day "Big Jim" went to his cafe in the early afternoon, when his dining room was deserted save for a lone diner. A few minutes later an employe, hearing two shots which he believed to be automobile tire blowouts, went to the front door to investigate, and found his employer stretched on the floor in a pool of blood—dead. The lone diner had disappeared. Why was he killed? Who killed him? The police admitted they were baffled. Was it the Black Hand, that dread society which terrorizes Chicago's Italian colonies, or was it a former lover of Dale Winter? Was it a member of an underworld gang, jealous of "Big Jim's" power and wealth?

"Big Jim" was laid to rest in a $2,500 bronze casket, and the underworld mourned the loss of one of its most colorful members.

Perhaps it knew who fired the bullets which took his life; but then, the underworld does not tell.

Farm Notes

FIELDS NEED AID
Hauling green corn from the field to the silo is an expensive part of the storage of silage, and the distance which the corn must be transported has much to do with the cost of the silage, especially in hilly country.

Where only a single field is located near the silo, the question arises as to whether silage corn can be grown upon it each year.

On the Belmont County Experiment Farm a block of land near the silo has been growing silage corn continuously since 1917. Walter Mahan, superintendent of the farm and J. S. Cutler, assistant in agronomy at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, have reported on results of the practice.

Their conclusion is that where silage corn is to be grown continuously on one field, the fertility program should be so planned as to meet the fertilizer needs of the crop and at the same time maintain the supply of organic matter in the soil. Such a program should include the liberal application of well-rotted manure, together with both broadcast and hill or row fertilizer applications for corn and the growing of some sort of cover crop on the land over winter.

Keep Your Motor Running Smooth With Eldred Pennsylvania Oil

The market is flooded with so-called lubricants having all the appearance of good oil, but containing few of the essentials required for the lubrication of an automobile engine. These poor oils allow motor bearings, cylinders, and timing gears to become worn and noisy, hastening the depreciation of your car. Such oils are expensive at any price.

Lock the stable before the horse is stolen. Use EL-DRED 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oils in the crank case of your motor to protect its working parts against heat and friction. The results will please you. The price is right.

Bellbrook News

All former residents and the public in general are invited to attend the seventh annual homecoming of the M. E. Church at Mount Holly on Sunday, September 30, 1928.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mildred Pierson were held at her late residence on Friday afternoon, a large concourse of friends and relatives being present to pay their last tribute of respect to a worthy, lovable woman. Mrs. Pierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Grottelier, was born in Sugar-creek Township, September 11, 1864, and by a strange coincidence, died on the anniversary of her birth, September 11, 1928. She was married to Robert Pierson, March 28, 1905. Her several places of residence, other than here, being Fairfield, O., Ft. Collins, Col., Duluth Minn., Ironton, Ohio. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Shirley Pierson, who is between two and three years of age. She also leaves her father and mother (above mentioned) and one brother and a sister, Elsworth and Mary Etta Grottelier.

The services were conducted by Rev. Graham of the local Presbyterian church assisted by Rev. Knapp of the M. E. congregation. Burial was made in Mt. Zion Cemetery. The husband and family desire to extend their thanks to kind neighbors and friends for their assistance during the sickness and death of the deceased.

Through the thoughtfulness of our friend, Howard Woods, we have in our possession an ancient state, congressional and county political ticket of the Whig party dating back perhaps, many years before the Civil War. Mr. Woods informed us that the ancient piece of paper was found among the effects of the late James Elliver who resided three miles southwest of Bellbrook. GERMANY PICTURED AS MAKING REAL COMEBACK

By DR. JULIUS KLEIN
Commercial Expert

(Julius Klein was born at San Jose, Cal., June 27, 1883. He is a graduate of the University of California and received M. A. and Ph. D. degrees at Harvard, later studying at the University of Berlin and the Sorbonne, Paris. After spending several years in research work he taught Latin, history and economics at Harvard from 1915 to 1923. He was appointed to the commerce department at Washington while at Harvard and in 1921 was made director of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which post he has since held. His home is in Washington, D. C.)

The achievements of the "New Germany" in trade, industry and transportation demonstrate an extraordinary capacity for recovery from one of the greatest of the world's economic disasters. The German people, ardently, tenaciously, have been toiling up the hill out of the dark abyss, moved by a dogged determination to regain the commercial position that was enjoyed before the world was plunged into the maelstrom of war.

The figures of German trade are rising. The figures for the first half of the present year show that Germany shipped to foreign countries $212,000,000 more than in the corresponding six months of 1927. And the surplus of imports over exports was $78,000,000 less. German export is increasing more steadily, and at a greater pace, than that of any other important European country.

The industrial recovery of Germany is being stimulated by the German organizing genius, the achievements of German science, the improved industrial equipment and the rapid progress of efficiency in production and the effective marshaling of economic forces.

The labor situation in Germany leaves much to be desired, however. Discontent and even a certain degree of menace are discernible in the ranks of German workmen, springing apparently from the feeling that wages are still more or less out of line with living costs and the country's general economic advance.

Germany, after the postwar loss of nearly all her mercantile marine, has now rebuilt this to 70 per cent of its prewar size, possessing today more than 2,500,000 gross tons of shipping and again ranking high as a maritime nation of the world. Germany is re-establishing her world-wide services with modern and economical ships. Her shipping lines have effected numerous amalgamations, larger companies absorbing smaller ones for the purpose of eliminating competitive services and gaining control of feeder lines.

Advancing in civil aviation, last year the total distance flown by German planes was 6,200,000 miles nearly fourteen times the mileage recorded only four years earlier.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. ©192

READ THIS FIRST:

Shut within the doors of every home there is the warm and glowing story of a mother's incomparable love. Mrs. Milburn had come to the Little Yellow House, on Flower Street, owned by Uncle Bill Parks, twenty-five years before, when she and Charlie Milburn were married. Through all these years they had only known poverty. Mrs. Milburn had kept everything neat and looked after her three children, Emmy, eighteen; Dan, thirteen, and Perry, twenty-one. While the little yellow house, on the ugly street near the mill, was now sooty and begrimed, it had never lost its charm for Mrs. Milburn. The story opens on Mrs. Milburn's birthday. Grandmother Pentland, who had never approved of Mrs. Milburn's marriage to Charlie, has arrived. Grandmother urges Mrs. Milburn to accept fifty dollars as a present from her to pay the long overdue rent. Grandmother takes the opportunity of again scolding about the shiftlessness of Charlie Milburn. Mrs. Milburn finally takes the money. As Grandmother is leaving she asks Emmy to take her out to her car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

"What's this Holts hanging around the house for, all the time?" Grandmother Pentland asked sharply, when she and Emmy stood in the backyard beside her smart little closed car.

"Why—I don't know—He and Perry are good friends," Emmy faltered, "and we all like him." She never had stopped to figure out why Robb came to the house so often. He just came, that was all.

"Nonsense! He's after you," Grandmother Pentland said, and her lips came together with a snap. Her black eyes seemed to pierce the darkness like twin gimlets. "How old are you, Emmy, now?"

"Seventeen."

"Himm—Well, your mother met your father when she was about your age," the old lady went on. "Don't you do what she did, mind! Don't you marry a good-looking face and a tender voice—and then be sorry for it all the rest of your life!"

The thought flashed across Emmy's mind that if her mother was sorry she had married her good-looking father, she certainly did not seem at all sorry.

"This Holts may look like a movie actor, but don't forget that he's nothing but a factory hand down in Jim Tello's woolen mill just the same—and probably all ways will be!"

"He's a foreman!" Emmy broke in, quite to defend him. "And he goes to night schools. He's studying."

"See? There you are! Standing up for him already!" Grandmother Pentland was bitterly triumphant. "All right, Emmy; it's nothing to me, I'm sure, if you want to get yourself mixed up with a mill hand and stay in this place all the rest of your days!"

"Oh, no—No!" Emmy's voice was a little wailing cry. "Well, then, keep your head on your shoulders! And remember the good old proverb: 'Marry not for money, but marry where money is.' There's no better advice for a poor girl like you, Emmy!"

She climbed nimbly into her automobile and tucked a fur robe snugly around her knees.

"You understand me, Emmy?" she asked, and her words seemed to clink together like pieces of money.

Emmy nodded her head. She was still nodding it thoughtfully when her grandmother backed the car out of the narrow driveway and drove off into the chilly darkness. She stood there alone, for a moment, looking around her.

The little backyard was like a room shut in by its high walls. It stood open to the starless sky, and the lighted windows of the mill looked down upon it. In the summer it was filled with Mrs. Milburn's flowers, and the fragrance of it sometimes caught at Emmy's throat when she stepped into it. But tonight it seemed dark and close as a prison cell to her. The air was heavy, and it smelled and tasted of smoke. In one of the neighboring yards a child was crying loudly.

"Oh, no—no!" Emmy repeated aloud the words she had just said to her grandmother as she turned and started back towards the house.

Suddenly, halfway across the muddy lawn, she stopped. One of the kitchen window shades had been left up, and through the glass she could see her mother and Robb bending over something on the table. The light from the lamp struck upwards on Robb's face—on his dark, honest eyes, his arched nose, his lips that came together so firmly above the clean line of his chin. "Yes, he was every bit as good to look at as Grandmother Pentland had said he was looking down at him, I'd have done it long ago," Emmy reflected with the wisdom of seventeen.

"Nonsense! He's after you," Grandmother Pentland said.

Why, even if she were old enough to really fall in love with a man she never would fall in love with Robb Holts, she told herself. She knew him far too well. She knew him as she knew Dan or Perry. He was like one of her brothers to her.

"He's after you," Grandmother Pentland had said in that sure way of hers.

"How silly! It's impossible," thought Emmy. But the idea that he might be was exquisitely disturbing to her, all the same.

It stayed in her mind and made her shy a second or two later when she opened the back door and came face to face with him.

"I've been asking Robb to stay and have supper with us," Mrs. Milburn said as she stepped into the kitchen. "But he won't. And just see what he's brought me, Emmy. A jar of Ming Cha tea—it smells just like flowers drying in the sun, doesn't it?"

Emmy's shy gaze went from the little jar that was held up to her to Robb's face. He was looking down at her with that engaging friendliness of his, and running a hand through his dark unruly hair that never would lie smooth and flat.

"I can't stay. I'm not dressed. I just ran in for a minute on my way up from the mill," he explained.

Emmy's eyes, critical all at once, went over him. Over the rough blue shirt that he wore, the faded bow tie, the cheap suit that he had on. A faint smell of wool seemed to come from all of his clothes.

"And this is just the way he'll come home every night of his life, most likely! In a blue shirt and greasy clothes, smelling of wool," said Emmy to herself.

Any girl who married him would have to live right here, too, probably, in one of those little ramshackle houses. She would have to do her own work, and she would have to scrimp and save the way all the women of Flower Street had to scrimp and save. She would grow old before her time, all her youth and beauty steamed out of her face over the wash tub and the soap suds.

Emmy shivered a little.

"If Robb wants to go, mother, we mustn't keep him," she said, in a flat voice, and walked across the kitchen to the door that led into the dining room.

In the hall he paused, looking into the sitting-room where the rosy lamp light shone on the red geraniums, the gilt picture frames,

The Theater

The increasing demands of American managers for the rights to English plays has brought forth a vigorous protest from St. John Ervine, celebrated English author. Calling attention to the seriousness of the situation he warns that unless the American managers are "put in their proper place" the West End of London will become a suburb of Broadway.

It is, of course, an acknowledged fact that in his struggle to achieve fame it is necessary for the English author to "play-up" to the American theater. Not only does he secure more money for his plays in America, but their success there usually reassures their production in London.

Thus the English author is forced to pay heed to the demands of the American manager.
